Admiral Blue Seeks Sea Duty. Rear Admiral Victor Blue has again sked the Secretary of the Navy to relieve him from duty as chief of the bureau of navigation. Aside from the fact that Admiral Blue thinks he has carried the burdens of the bureau long enough, he desires to serve his tour of duty afloat. Last summer Admiral Blue made a similar request, but the Secretary refused to consider it, as he did not wish to make a change while he was preparing his estimates for Congress. It is altogether probable that Admiral Blue will be relieved about the first of the year, and given command of a battleship.
